Diána Tislér is a nature conservation engineer and tour guide in the Fertő region, the Hanság, the Lajta mountains and now also in Bakony.

As Dia phrases her dedication to nature: 'I think I am a kind of an interpreter. I translate the results of scientific work into everyday language. I love my job because nature is always different! Nature is constantly educating and teaching! I give thanks every day for being able to do what I love. I value my family roots; I wouldn't be a fully committed advocate for nature now if I hadn't been raised to be sensitive to nature. My slogan is the following: 'Nature knows no boundaries!' No artificial borders matter: nature easily crosses them. But it also means that nature related programs do not have a 'season' and despite the landscape-shaping activities of humans, it always finds its way! But how we can do this well: I want to show everyone these good examples! Each program is also a new opportunity for me to discover 'Nature (really) knows no boundaries!'" Dia welcomes those interested on foot, by bike or even on a horse-carriage reflecting a special rural atmosphere.
